LID IS LIFTED AND STAMPEDE BEGINS

All Indian reservations in the nine western states designated for mineral exploitation were thrown open Monday morning at 1 o'clock under the provisions of the senate act, and without further ceremony or proclamation of the president.

Word to this effect was received last night from interested mining men in the northern part of the state, and arrivals form the main line of the Santa Fe yesterday state that the law was understood to be in force.

Advices from different localities bordering on the Navajo and White Mountain reservation indicated that several hundred prospectors, miners and investors were ready to move into the promised land and in some cases the wildest speculation was being indulged in wherein the rancor held the cards in his hands. No trouble was anticipated with Indians, as all had been informed of the official action ordained to which they submitted without a murmur.

GOVERNOR APPOINTS MEMBERS OF STATE RESOURCES BOARD

Phoenix, July 25.—The new Arizona Resources Board has been appointed by Governor Thomas E. Campbell, the men selected to serve on this important body representing practically every section of the state, the members being representative citizens of their various sections.

Judge Joseph H. Kibbey, former governor of Arizona, is to be president of the resources board; the members will be F. L. Ewing, J. P. Welker, J. R. Hulet and Andrew P. Martin.

"Judge Kibbey is probably the foremost man in Arizona in his knowledge and experience in matters pertaining to reclamation and irrigation," said Governor Campbell yesterday. "He is an expert in procedure and in knowing how to get results at headquarters."

"F. L. Ewing of Yuma is a reclamation and irrigation engineer of great experience and represents that part of the state in these matters."

J. R. Walker of Safford is a land owner in the upper Gila, a former supervisor of Graham county and a practical man to represent that section.

J. R. Hulet of Winslow is a business man, banker and farmer, with large interests in Apache and Navajo countries—an excellent man to represent the Little Colorado Basin.

Andrew P. Martin is state commander of the American Legion, thus representing on the board the interests of the veterans of the great war, is an excellent business man and a former state senator, and with a past experience that will be of the greatest value to the board in getting results."

HEARINGS IN DEPORTATIONS ARE RESUMED

Douglas, July 25.—The preliminary hearing of M. J. (Mike) Cunningham, prominent pioneer banker of Bisbee charged with kidnapping as the result of alleged connection with the I. W. W. deportations at Bisbee two years ago, was held this morning before Justice W. C. Jack. The evidence offered was without any startling phases and although the hearing proved to be one of the shortest of the several already held, the spectators showed little interest except in the testimony given by George Wiercinski a native of Russia, who was one of the men deported.

Wiercinski, a small man with a big accent, was a willing witness and was so eager to tell of his personal affairs before, during and after the deportation that the prosecution and counsel for the defense were frequently forced to interrupt his testimony when it started getting too far from the main issue.

Was Frequently Fired

On being cross examined by Attorney H. W. Burgess of counsel for the defense, Wiercinski said he had worked for the Copper Queen, C & A., and a few shifts for the Shattuck mines at Bisbee. He stated that he had worked in practically every shaft in the Warren district and had been discharged and re-employed more times than he had hairs in his head, but in attempting to say this the witness' knowledge of English grew hazy and he had to repeat it several times before it was finally understood.

Wiercinski testified that he had worked in the mines in Bisbee until several days before the deportation, when he had gone on strike.

"Did you belong to the union?" asked Attorney Burgess.

"Yes sir," answered the witness.

"What union?"

"The I. W. W.," replied Wiercinski. The witness said he joined the I. W. W. at the time of the strike and that he was then living in a cabin with one John Melnick, who, he said was also a member of the I. W. W. Since the deportations, however, he testified, he had allowed his membership in the "Wobblies" to expire.

On being questioned as to how long he remained at Columbus, New Mexico, where the deportees were taken, Wiercinski replied, "sixty four days."

Liked Free Board at Columbus

Counsel for the defense asked him if it were not a fact that he could have left Columbus about eight days after the arrival of the deportees at that place. Wiercinski admitted this but said that, although he had some money with him, he stayed at Columbus as long as he was given food and a place to sleep. "Would you have stayed there forever if they had kept on feeding you?" asked Burgess.

And Wiercinski's reply: "Certainly," which he gave in a convincing tone, provoked a ripple of laughter. The witness said that while at Columbus he had been told that he would not be allowed to return to Bisbee. On returning to the district, though, he said, he experienced no trouble in getting in and was given his old job back in the mines until once more discharged. He secured another job, he testified, but got sick and quit.

Freeman Crouch, the first witness called, testified that he saw Cunningham, armed with a gun, in front of the post office, with a crowd of other armed men, on the morning of the deportation. To his knowledge, Cunningham did or said nothing to any of the men in "the ring" said the witness and that he Crouch, did not remember seeing the defendant again that day.

Witness: Not Positive.

J. B. Chase testified that he had known Cunningham for 15 or 20 years and that he saw Cunningham "taking some men to the depot" on the day of the deportation and again that day at the ball park at Warren, where the deportees were assembled, and questioned before being put on the train. Here, he said, he heard Cunningham tell a man to "get into line." On cross examination the witness said that he was not certain that Cunningham was taking the men to the depot when he saw him that morning, and that the defendant had not touched, handled or spoken to any of the four or five men under arrest, but that, as the banker was walking near the bunch of men with a gun, he, Crouch, assumed that he was one of the men who had taken them in charge. He admitted that there was nothing in Cunningham's conduct to indicate that he was doing anything but walking around.

Brown Uses Imagination.

"Fred W. Brown, who swore to the blanket warrant charging all of the defendants in the deportation cases with kidnapping, testified that on the day of the deportation he saw Cunningham walking near the "head of the column" when he, Brown, and other men were marched from the postoffice to the depot. He said Cunningham said or did nothing to him, nor did he see him take action against or speak to any of the deportees. He said he "imagined Cunningham was leading the procession," but was not certain of it.

Mrs. Kate Bercellino who said she had known Cunningham by sight in Bisbee for more than ten years, said that she saw the defendant near the Bisbee depot on the morning of July 12th. The accused to the best of her knowledge was doing nothing but walking around, while armed with a rifle, she said. Mrs. Bercellino declared that she had gone to the depot to give some money to her brother, Pete Caretto, who was one of the men deported, but after she had reached the station became so excited that she went home without giving Caretto the money.

J. F. Hollman, the last witness called, said he had seen Cunningham walking with the guards on the day of the deportation armed, he testified with a big gun.

The county attorney then rested. No witnesses were called by the defense. The hearing which was expected to have been one of the longest yet held, occupied approximately only an hour.

The hearings of James Boyd and Fred Sandner, two other Bisbee mining men, were to have been held this afternoon, Boyd's hearing starting at 1:30 o'clock. Both the defendants are old-time residents of the Warrant district.
